

Celebrating Thirty Years

Lee Kennedy Co. Marks Major Milestone

Celebrating 30 years of success in construction, Lee Kennedy Co., Inc. (LKCo) is a recognized leader in the New England construction industry. The company's longevity in the competitive and often volatile market place is a testament to its years of building partnerships throughout the region, resulting in a strong reputation for quality work, integrity and client service.

Where it All Began

When Lee Kennedy founded the company in 1978, he had worked as an architectural draftsman, field laborer, ironworker and crane operator. He understood the many different aspects of construction and set about building a company that would answer every unique need. He hired a full-time labor workforce to increase productivity and created a corporate culture of collaboration, cooperation and accountability. Though much of the company's initial work was in corporate interiors, LKCo quickly proved its wide range of expertise by branching into the academic, commercial, hospitality, historic restoration and healthcare markets.

Quality Work & Client Service Drive Business

A host of high profile projects over the years, including the Boston Public Library McKim Building renovation, the Harvard University Murr Athletic Center, International Cargo Port and Louis Boston helped cement LKCo's status as one of the area's most knowledgeable and versatile contractors. Another large part of this success stems from the company's client-oriented approach. This close collaboration enhances the company's ability to maximize budgets, exceed schedule goals, achieve LEED certification and maintain client operations during construction, among other critical construction elements.

Looking Ahead

Over the past year, Lee Kennedy Co. has completed some of the largest and most complex projects in its history. Looking ahead to the next 30 years and beyond, the company maintains its commitment to the kind of smart, organic growth that has gotten it where it is today. A collaborative spirit, dedication to clients and quality workmanship have formed a solid foundation that will help take Lee Kennedy Co. to the next level.
